

Dr. Belinda Otukolo Saltiban is a strategic leader on equity, inclusion, and diversity. Currently, she is the Chief Inclusion and Diversity Officer at Utah Valley University. With almost two decades of experience in harnessing inclusive excellence and innovating social justice praxis in higher education, Dr. Otukolo Saltiban foregrounds relationships and collaboratively drives systemic change with students, staff, and faculty to empower transformative conditions and possibilities. Her commitments to advancing equity, diversity, and inclusion lead her to intentionally cultivate community partnerships; design campus-wide strategic plans; facilitate difficult conversations; develop and implement expansive programs; assess campus climates; and engage in qualitative and quantitative research, and data analyses. She was a part of Harvard Business School's 2019 Young American Leadership Program (YALP) cohort; worked on multiple grants including the Howard Hughes Medical Institute (HHMI); maintains her membership with the National Association of Diverse Officers in Higher Education (NADOHE); and contributes to research, teaching, and service in her respective roles. Dr. Otukolo Saltiban earned her doctoral degree in Education, Culture, and Society from the University of Utah.